

How To Refuse the COVID Vaccination In Your Workplace

By Syndicated Columnist Cathy Harris

As a former Workplace and Discrimination Consultant, I had to file 10 EEOC.gov complaints including a Sexual Harassment and Whistleblower complaint (www.TheCathyHarrisStory.com) to receive justice from my former employer, U.S. Customs Service (now called 'Customs and Border Protection' or CBP.gov) and because of that I won my case and was able to retire at the age of 48.

I also became 'well-versed' in federal laws and filed 5 of my discrimination cases in federal district court my ownself. This process is usually carried out by attorneys. Then I wrote 3 books on workplace discrimination to help others receive justice.

So here is a bit of advice for those who don't know how to maneuver the workplace system -- whether you are working for a local, state, or federal employer or a small or large corporation, if YOUR EMPLOYER tells you -- you have to take the COVID vaccination or be fired, don't walk away but let them fire you instead. Try to prolong receiving the vaccination as long as possible but once they give you a final ultimatum -- then again, let them fire you.

Once you get fired go to the Department of Labor (DOL.gov) office (online or in-person) and file for 'unemployment benefits'. Try to do this in person. I am not even sure how many weeks you can receive these funds but at one time it was at least 27 weeks in the state of Georgia and many people received at least $300 a week.

Just remember it is different in each state and it also depends on how long you were employed and whom you were employed with. For many these funds will be enough for them as long as they cut back -- but others need to seriously think about relocating and moving in with family and friends.

You should be approved to start receiving the funds in 30 days once you file for unemployment benefits or they might deny you. If you are denied your only recourse is to hire a labor attorney to assist you so set aside funds for this. However, once you write down the reason for your termination, which is "Refusal to take CORONA/COVID vaccination," -- they should approve you for unemployment benefits simply because they know this is "illegal."

In many cases, if you walk away you can still receive these benefits but it might be harder for you to get approved for unemployment benefits if you quit your job. Lawsuits are coming in so make sure you fight back. Don't walk away from a perfectly good job -- again - LET THEM FIRE YOU!!!

You only need 4 people (10 would be better) to file a class-action lawsuit so keep up with the status of others in case you need them to fight back. Many people might leave and move to other cities after their terminations, which might disqualify them to receive local unemployment benefits, but they can still join you in a class-action or you can file an individual workplace complaint for "Wrongful Termination."

It looks like to me because we are going into a new era, #GoldenEra, they want people out of these jobs so they will be available to take all the new jobs that will be out there. Also, they want people out of jobs so they can use Artificial Intelligence (AI) and turn people into half humans and half machines in #SmartCities. They are trying to turn people into a 'new age' slave. Lots is happening so turn off the TV and wake up and pay attention. Read my articles and e-newsletters at www.CathyHarrisInternational.com to catch up.

Remember there will be thousands of new jobs, so you being unemployed might only be 'short-term.' Just remember right now there are a ton of jobs out there so just take something so you can make ends meet and have health insurance, but because many people are receiving more in 'unemployment benefits' -- they are refusing to go back into workplaces especially if they had abusive supervisors and managers.

To fight back even in the workplace get involved with Community Organizing and work with local Community Activists and Advocates. Stay away from any National Gatherings at this time because the government is waiting to put you in jail – just for showing up.
